

Amends Constitution: Requires two-thirds supermajority for legislature to declare emergency that accelerates law's effective date; exceptions

Result of "Yes" Vote: "Yes" vote requires two-thirds supermajority for legislative emergency declaration that makes law effective earlier than ninety days after legislative session ends; specified exceptions.

Result of "No" Vote: "No" vote retains existing requirement of a simple majority for legislative emergency declaration that makes law effective earlier than ninety days after legislative session ends.

Summary: Currently, the Oregon Constitution provides that no law takes effect until ninety days from the end of the session at which it was passed, unless an emergency has been declared in the preamble or body of the law. The legislature may not declare an emergency in any act regulating taxation or tax exemptions. Laws, including budget appropriations, passed without an accompanying emergency declaration may be subject to voter referendum to affirm, revise or repeal. Currently such emergency declarations may be adopted by majority vote of legislature. Measure would require two-thirds supermajority in both chambers of legislature to adopt emergency declaration; exception in some circumstances for bills passed in direct response to "catastrophic disasters" under Article X-A of Constitution, and for certain appropriation bills.
